

"The figure was carved from granite in an era when there were no metal tools available"

BBC News posted an article on February 14, 2017 entitled: "Greece displays '7,000-year-old archaeological enigma.'" The article says the carved object is "7,000 years old, prior to the time that humans had developed metal tools". Scientists have postulated that it took thousands of years of human evolution for humans to begin working with tools.

Too bad they ignore the Bible, because, instead of taking "thousands of years of human evolution for humans to begin working with tools," the Bible accurately reports that within the first eight generations of human existence, which was at least 5,000 years ago (or, at least 6,000 years ago according to the ages listed in the Septuagint in Genesis 5 & 11), humans had developed metal tools. (Genesis 4:1; Gen 4:17-22 NJB) Tubal-cain, the Bible reports, "was the ancestor of all who work copper and iron." This would demystify scientists' "enigma."

*"The wise are put to shame, alarmed, caught out
because they have rejected Yahweh's word.
What price their wisdom now?"
(Jeremiah 8:9 NJB)*

Human wisdom compared and contrasted with God's wisdom is worthless!
